

David Sutphen, co-chair of the AT&T-funded Internet Innovation Alliance, says that Net Neutrality is a "distraction" that "only concerns those already online." Sutphen calls Net Neutrality rules "divisive new regulations," which could have "unintended consequences" for those seeking to bridge the digital divide.

Net Neutrality supports universal access to the internet, protects free speech, and promotes innovation. It does not allow giant communications corporations to control who can and cannot use the internet. If you permit these organizations to control the internet our best chance for free and equal communication will be gone. Please do not allow this to happen.