

David Sutphen, co-chair of the AT&T-funded Internet Innovation Alliance, says that Net Neutrality is a "distraction" that "only concerns those already online." Sutphen calls Net Neutrality rules "divisive new regulations," which could have "unintended consequences" for those seeking to bridge the digital divide.

David Sutphen, co-chair of the AT&T-funded Internet Innovation Alliance, claims that Net Neutrality is a "distraction" that "only concerns those already online." He calls Net Neutrality rules "divisive new regulations," which could have "unintended consequences" for those seeking to bridge the digital divide.

My ass! This is a too-common but clear attempt to threaten the citizens of this country with big business's financial power, and is about monopoly control of public communication - and nothing else. We already have way too much of that already, no? Please do the right thing, and maintain an internet free of corporate, government, or any other kind of manipulation or constraint.

Thank you -JM