

David Sutphen, co-chair of the AT&T-funded Internet Innovation Alliance, says that Net Neutrality is a "distraction" that "only concerns those already online." Sutphen calls Net Neutrality rules "divisive new regulations," which could have "unintended consequences" for those seeking to bridge the digital divide.

Net neutrality is a distraction only for those firms seeking to maintain only "monopolistic competition" for access to the web, limited to a handful of profit-maximizing commercial giants.