

Industry front group Americans for Prosperity wrote that there hasn't been "a single significant incident of egregious behavior" by phone and cable companies," adding that Net Neutrality is "a solution in search of a problem."

It is essential for the internet (highway) to remain open, free and accessible to all. It has already been demonstrated that several social network options have increased communication among nations in strife, provides valuable information, both large and small, and a new study indicates the use of the internet by older citizens increases brain activity.
