

Industry front group Americans for Prosperity wrote that there hasn't been "a single significant incident of egregious behavior" by phone and cable companies," adding that Net Neutrality is "a solution in search of a problem."

Keep the Internet open on an equal basis for all users. The corporations controlling the services should have no voice in the content, and should not be able to censor communication.