

Before the FCC decided to pursue Net Neutrality protections, Fox News Channel's Glenn Beck warned his audience that the government was "trying to take over the media." Beck later said that Net Neutrality would "wildly affect your life and free speech" by forcing a "Marxist utopia" on the Internet. Glenn Beck's comments are absurd. Net neutrality is important for the growth of internet commerce. It is imperative to keep the internet open and free from control by any one or more internet service providers, phone company, or government agency. If the FCC wants to exert control over the internet, that's fine. As long as they defend the right to a free and neutral internet. I think the FCC should enforce net neutrality.
