

Industry front group Americans for Prosperity wrote that there hasn't been "a single significant incident of egregious behavior" by phone and cable companies," adding that Net Neutrality is "a solution in search of a problem."

Americans for Prosperity should rename themselves Americans for Foreign Prosperity. After all, they are defending a system which keeps Americans at a disadvantage compared to the citizens of so many other countries.