

Before the FCC decided to pursue Net Neutrality protections, Fox News Channel's Glenn Beck warned his audience that the government was "trying to take over the media." Beck later said that Net Neutrality would "wildly affect your life and free speech" by forcing a "Marxist utopia" on the Internet. We've seen the power of a free internet in places like Iran and issues giving pause to even the government of China. The internet must remain and open to continue providing these benefits, these freedoms that pressure oppressive governments. Is the phone company allowed to censor what I say and to whom? An internet service provider has no legitimate role in monitoring or censoring the internet.
