

Industry front group Americans for Prosperity wrote that there hasn't been "a single significant incident of egregious behavior" by phone and cable companies," adding that Net Neutrality is "a solution in search of a problem."

The fact that file sharing applications are attempting to be blocked by Comcast is a major issue. Many companies, specifically the ever popular MMORPG communities, have made attempts to reduce the amount of boxes that must be shipped and sold by allowing the download and update of their software online. They also use this method to ensure that even if you lose your box, you can still download the software you purchased and be able to play. These companies use bit-torrent style software to enable you to download their software in an efficient way.
