

I'm tired of giving up my right to privacy just because I have a television or a computer. It isn't okay for people to watch everything I do, just to market to me. It also isn't okay for them to prevent me from looking at what I want to look at just because the keepers of the tubes don't agree with my political beliefs.

The FCC must reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" so that it can keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.

Without vital Net Neutrality protections and the ability to enforce them, the Internet will cease to be a public platform for free speech, equal opportunity, economic growth and innovation. Instead, companies like AT&T, Verizon and Comcast, which have a commercial incentive to limit the free-flowing Web, will decide whose voices are heard.

You still have the power to protect the public interest. Please stand with us and keep the Internet in the hands of the people who use it every day.
