

When the extreme left-wing insists on net neutrality, it is obviously based on a hatred for the free market and capitalism. There is a constant attack on the free market by these left-wing nuts. In America we know that free market capitalism is what truly works. If net neutrality were to be used, it would be a failure, the arguments put forth by the advocates of this have been proven false time and time again. Their personal attacks on people they don't like, or agree with, or have the same ideology as them, does not represent the majority of this country. Reject any new regulations, the free-market is what will let the Internet continue to be the success it is today.