

The FCC must reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" so that it can keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.

Corporations have no right to charge more to different people.

I know something needs to be done about bandwidth, but letting the corporations self-regulate will not inhibit abuse.

Without proper regulation companies could give discounts to parent companies or increase the price on companies that are not friendly with service providers.

They could charge media organization more just for the views they portray.

If this happens whoever owns the cables will dictate who has a voice in the internet.

With ever increasing bandwidth cost the FCC has to come up with an intelligent solution to the issue.

The FCC can't just let service providers run amok. Free speech has a preferred position in the U.S. so corporations can, trample on speech regardless of what rights corporations might lose.

You still have the power to protect the public interest. Please stand with us and keep the Internet in the hands of the people who use it every day.
