

I'll leave the canned response below alone, but it about sums up the "Free Markets, Free Internet and Leave the Internet alone."

I don't want some dirt-bag like Mark Lloyd the "Diversity Czar" regulating speech he doesn't like.

First Amendment means I/you can say anything we like, but not free from consequences if "we" go over the line.

Not because we are not the minority flavor of the month, certain color/party/geographic location.

And now the canned response.

The arguments made by advocates of so-called net neutrality regulations have been proven false by nearly a decade of experience since their concerns were first raised. The Internet is a remarkable free market success story, and the vast majority of Internet users are not clamoring for regulation.

Self-styled consumer groups asking for regulation actually represent an extreme left-wing ideology that is hostile to free-market capitalism and puts its trust in government. That is not the position of the "grassroots" or most American Internet users. I urge you to reject new regulations and allow the free-market Internet to continue flourishing.
