RE: MB Docket No. 10-56

LSC Design, Inc.

Dear Chairman Genachowski and Commissioners:

Senft Law Firm, LLC

Since 1935, Martin Library has provided free public library services to residents of York City and surrounding municipalities and has maintained a commitment to meeting the changing needs of our diverse community through quality and service innovations. More and more, people look to the library for free access to the Internet (provided by Comcast), resources for jobs, education and training, free quality family activities, and all informational needs. An anchor in downtown York, the library is steadfast in its service to over 41,000 monthly patrons. In 2009, Martin Library served over 500,000 visitors (a record high); it's evident that free library services are needed now more than ever.

PeoplesBank

Embracing new technology has enabled Martin Library to adapt, retain relevancy in the digital age and continue to serve more people every year. Strategic partnerships have also played a major role in Martin Library's service to the York community. In Comcast, we have found a company and a partner willing to help us launch new educational programs like a First Grade Membership Campaign as well as provide us with critical improvements, such as broadband, to fully equip our library's slate of educational resources.

Broadband access is critical among our service offerings at Martin Library, as we help level the playing field for job seekers in our community. Less than 44 percent of the top 100 U.S. retailers accept in-store paper applications. Each day our staff members assist patrons in preparing resumes and cover letters, searching and applying for jobs online and opening e-mail accounts. For our local families, Martin Library replaces some of what is lost when income disappears such as Internet access, books, magazines, newspapers, movies, music, educational programs and entertainment. Comcast's continued support has helped Martin Library maintain these core services and launch new initiatives. Importantly, the company's employees have volunteered alongside our staff and Comcast has helped to raise awareness of all that we do through its Newsmakers program.

M&T Bank

We're fortunate to count Comcast as a champion of Martin Library and we believe that Comcast will continue to enrich our communities once partnered with NBC.

Sincerely,

Karla Heberlig
