

The FCC must reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" so that it can keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.

Without vital Net Neutrality protections and the ability to enforce them, the Internet will cease to be a public platform for free speech, equal opportunity, economic growth and innovation. Instead, companies like AT&T, Verizon and Comcast, which have a commercial incentive to limit the free-flowing Web, will decide whose voices are heard.

The priority of The FCC is to first serve the people. In expanding Broadband access the FCC fulfills this obligation, except when it turns over control of the access, not to real persons, but to profit motivated corporations.

You still have the power to protect the public interest. Please stand with us and keep the Internet in the hands of the people who use it every day.