

Yes, carriers should have to notify you that your account usage is about to exceed a threshold.

Consumers should be able to set automatic cutoff limits. For example, if my account fees amount to $70 per month and I am about to exceed $100 in additional fees, my account should be limited to emergency calls (911) and calls to the carrier's service number (611). Data should be cut off.

Thanks!