

June 7, 2010

The Honorable Julius Genachowski
Chairman
Federal Communications Commission
445 12th Street, SW
Washington, DC 20554

Re: MB Docket No. 10-56

Dear Chairman Genachowski,

The Oakland Parents Literacy Project (OPLP) is the largest non-profit, community-based organization promoting student and family literacy within the Oakland Unified School District. In response to the fiscal crisis in the Oakland schools, OPLP has accelerated its efforts to support the school community.

We at OPLP are able to provide this critical assistance to the youth of Oakland due to the generous support of community partners like Comcast. Comcast has been a consistent supporter of our literacy programs, recently helping us to purchase books for 7,000 students in the District.

Comcast has also demonstrated its commitment to OPLP through the volunteer efforts of its employees. Comcast's local Education Projects Coordinator currently serves as a volunteer member of the OPLP Board of Directors and provides invaluable advice on many of our programs. In addition, she helps schools get connected with cable TV and Comcast High-Speed Internet access to enhance student learning through technology.

As you review the proposed joint venture between Comcast and NBC Universal, please keep in mind what a community-oriented company Comcast is and the difference it is making in the Oakland area with regard to literacy issues.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Denise Geer", is written over a large, faint background illustration of a tree with books at its base.

Denise Geer
Executive Director
Oakland Parents Literacy Project

CC: Commissioner Michael J. Copps
Commissioner Robert M. McDowell
Commissioner Mignon Clyburn
Commissioner Meredith Attwell Baker