Re: ET Docket Nos. 04-186, 02-380, and 10-24; WT Docket Nos. 08-166 and 08-167

Dear Ms. Dortch:

On June 14, 2010, Paul Margie and Ed Thomas of Wiltshire & Grannis LLP, Alex Phillips of WISPA, Mark Gibson of Comsearch, Dave Gurney of Motorola, John Malyar of Telcordia, Megan Stull and Rick Whitt of Google, Paul Lambert of Marvell, Neil Keon and Ian Trumpower of WSdb, Paula Boyd and Paul Garnett of Microsoft, Ed Melick of Shared Spectrum Company, Kerry Murray of Dell, and Jeff Schmidt, Peter Stanforth and Neeraj Srivastava of Spectrum Bridge met with Ruth Milkman, Paul Murray, James Schlichting and John Leibovitz of the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau, and Julius Knapp, Alan Stillwell and Rod Small of the Office of Engineering and Technology.

The group discussed: (1) the technology industry's commitment to white spaces investment and innovation; (2) the benefits to consumers from white spaces technologies; (3) the group's support for limited Part 15 treatment of non-Part 74 wireless microphones and opposition to expansion of Part 74 eligibility; (4) that the FCC should, in considering pending petitions for reconsideration, allow either a geolocation/database or spectrum sensing solution to interference concerns (but not mandate the use of both), along with the equipment certification safeguards and reserved channels already in the FCC's order; (5) the need to designate multiple TVWS database providers; (6) how further delay and/or over-restrictive rules would drive investment away from white spaces technology; and (7) how white spaces devices could use other frequencies in the TV band if the FCC were to re-pack the TV bands.

Pursuant to the Commission's rules, a copy of this notice is being filed electronically in the above-referenced dockets. If you require any additional information please contact the undersigned.

Sincerely yours,

/s/ Paul Margie
