RE: MB Docket No. 10-56

June 21, 2010

Dear Chairman Genachowski,

On behalf of the Denver Public Schools Foundation, I am writing to make you aware of the tremendous partnership we have established with Comcast and the support this company provides to the public schools of Denver, Colorado. I understand you will soon be reviewing Comcast's proposed transaction with NBC, and we would like to add our voice to those supporting Comcast in this endeavor.

The Denver Public Schools Foundation is a non-profit organization that, in partnership with the school district, raises and manages funds, makes strategic program investments and serves as a community leader so that all students have the opportunity to succeed. We are a major fundraiser for the district, and provide financial support for classroom activities, field trips, after school activities, music and sports programs and principal leadership and training. In total, we represent approximately 78,000 students in 152 schools across the district.

As the president and CEO of the Denver Public Schools Foundation, I have had the opportunity to work closely with leaders and representatives of Comcast for many years. Our organization has been fortunate to have Comcast's Senior Vice President for the region, Scott Binder, serve on our board of directors, and through Scott we have fostered a strong relationship with the company and its employees.

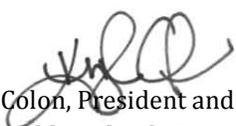

Comcast has been a significant source of support to us and the company has given back in many ways.. Our schools have been the sites for Comcast Cares Day efforts on numerous occasions, and hundreds of Comcast employees and their families volunteer. One year Comcast provided a major grant to accompany the employees' volunteer work. The environment in which children learn is critically important, and Comcast's contribution of time and financial support have surely changed the lives of DPS students and teachers for the better.

Also important are the contributions Comcast has provided in video production support, public service announcements and Newsmakers appearances on behalf of the Denver Public Schools Foundation. Telling our story is paramount to ensuring the continued role of our organization. We appreciate the opportunities Comcast provides us to do so.

Comcast also provides courtesy services to many Denver Public Schools. This contribution enables thousands of students to not only use, but also to embrace the internet, better preparing them for the economy of the 21st century.

Thanks to Comcast, our schools have better materials and field trips, our students have learned music, sports, and computer skills, and our principals are better prepared to face the challenges they encounter every day. We support Comcast's continued success and we urge the FCC to do the same.

Sincerely,

Kristin Colon, President and CEO
Denver Public Schools Foundation
