

I would like to see the government do more to promote local radio ownership. For instance in the Youngstown, Ohio Market Clear Channel and Cumulus practically own the entire market. There is no way for someone who has a passion to provide local service to the community because no institution is loaning money or investing any money to those who want to be a local owner/operator. If the government had a loan program for these types of projects then more local service could be provided to the public.
