

I use the internet every single day of my life. My future in a career as a software engineer depends on my access to the internet always being readily available, and not to be limited in any way(s). Without the internet being open I will not be able to view guides and user written books on forums, blogs, tutorial sites, and other web sites, because these companies will overcharge them to run as fast as the other sites, and then I'll be learning at a much slower pace. Censoring our internet not only stops freedom of speech and violates our amendments, but it is an advocate of devolution, and will degrade all of man kind.
