

You know it seems as if every company now days will "sell out" for a dollar. We would get charged the same and be limited to what we, as users, can access. I am pretty sure I live in America and that we have this little thing known as freedom. Now I know not everyone likes some of the material that can be accessed on the internet and that is okay, but we do not need to be policed by companies that feel they know what is best for us. We are slowly being censored in this country and it seems as if most people don't even realize it. I am choosing to not stand for this anymore and it starts with this issue. I do agree that we rely on the Internet as a public platform for free speech, equal opportunity, economic growth and innovation. Without vital Net Neutrality protections, companies like Verizon and Comcast, which have a commercial incentive to limit the free-flowing Web, can decide whether I will have a voice online. These companies should not have the power to determine my fate on the Internet.
