

I have an issue with cable companies arbitrarily setting the CCI byte (copy protection). This specifically undercuts the functions of 3rd party devices and allows the cable companies to unfairly take advantage of people who do not want to rent devices from them. It should be regulated so that the content owners (NOT the cable companies) have sole control on what programming gets protected.