

The internet is the communication platform choice of my generation. The internet's greatest feature is that all information is treated equally. This is certainly better for the spread of information. In addition, it is also driving a new economy. Without net neutrality web startup companies would be much more likely to fail and the US may not have the business success stories of Yahoo, Google, Youtube. The open internet guarantees freedom of communication, which facilitates an analog of the American Dream in which anybody can move to the top. Please don't let the telecoms control the internet.
