

The Internet is a vital part of our democracy. It is the public square of the 21st Century, and it is up to the FCC to keep it neutral. This battle for net neutrality is the great battle for our time, and the outcome will ultimately have enormous impact on our Republic. Private companies should not have the power to determine internet content and access.

As a concerned citizen, I ask the FCC to reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.
