

The internet must remain free of corporate bullying, and making decisions based only on filling their pockets with cash. Comcast and Verizon only care about how much money they can make, and not a bit about the people, or the right to choose.

Private companies have destroyed the economy, and are now destroying the gulf coast. When does someone take a stand against big companies taking control of (and ruining) our lives? Please reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.
