

I rely on the Internet as a public platform free speech, the free exchange of ideas and information, and the equal opportunity access to information. I also depend on the Internet as a public platform that enhances the promotion of economic growth and innovation. Without the vital Net Neutrality protections that are being advanced by organizations like "Save The Internet.com", companies like Verizon and Comcast, which have a commercial incentive to limit the free-flowing Web, will be able to determine whether I or anyone else who disagrees with their views or philosophies will have a voice online. These companies should not have the power to determine my freedom of expression on the Internet.

The FCC must retain the power to protect consumer access to the most important communications medium OF OUR TIMES! The FCC must stand with me and others who believe in the freedoms guaranteed by our constitution and do its duty to keep the Internet in the hands of the people who use it every day.

I implore you all to reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of the corporate barbarians who want to storm our gates and sack our Internet access right for profit.
