

I use the internet nearly every day for correspondence with pen-pals in other countries, to share my artwork with the world in a way that costs very little out of pocket, and for research into esoteric topics that might be otherwise difficult to learn about. It is very necessary that my internet connection not be tampered with by an ISP that wants to control what I can view, access, and broadcast.

Net Neutrality is a critical protection for the basic right of free speech as it exists on the internet.

Without protection from censorship, internet service providers will no doubt begin blocking whichever websites they prefer, either for ideological or monetary reasons. Please help us preserve the internet as a truly free and open forum for thought, a place for a wide variety of entertainment, and as a wonderful connection to others around the world.
