

I use the Internet to express my right of free speech. Many groups that have organized to affect policy decisions, groups that press for greater civic participation, groups that speak for me have learned to use the internet for communication. These groups should be unfettered in their access to me and I should be unfettered in my access to them. I want a voice online. Please establish net neutrality protections. Without them, companies like Verizon and Comcast, which have a commercial incentive to limit the free-flowing Web, can decide whether I will have a voice online. These companies should not have the power to determine my fate on the Internet. The FCC must have the power to protect consumer access to the most important communications medium of our time. The FCC must stand with me and keep the Internet in the hands of the people who use it every day. Please reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.
