

I rely on the Internet as a public platform for free speech, vital information, equal opportunity, economic growth and innovation. Without vital Net Neutrality protections, companies like Verizon and Comcast, which have a commercial incentive to limit the free-flowing Web, can decide what I can see, how often I can visit, where I can go on the internet, what restrictions or requirements will be imposed on me, and whether I will have a voice online. These companies should not have the power to determine my fate on the Internet.

The FCC must protect consumer access to the internet. The FCC must keep the Internet free to access and use for all the people who use it. Please reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of greedy corporate gatekeepers who only have an interest in broadening their bank accounts.
