

Frankly, it's impossible to know how any lack of neutrality has affected my life. It's equally difficult to determine how other instances of lack of corporate openness have personally affected me. Please see my next answer.

Net Neutrality is essential to a fair internet. It lowers the barrier to entry for internet startups, helps preserve choices among established companies, lets otherwise unknown candidates campaign, and could be even more important in the future.

Thanks for reading.