

I rely on the Internet as a public platform for free speech, equal opportunity, economic growth and innovation. I've spent the better part of my life working to enforce this principle in the public and private spheres.

Without vital Net Neutrality protections, companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast, which have a commercial incentive to limit the free-flowing Web, can decide whether I will have a voice online. These companies should not have the power to determine my fate and the fate of all Americans on the Internet.

The FCC must have the power to protect consumer access to the most important communications medium of our time. This is the basis of the First Amendment as it matters today.

The FCC must stand with me and keep the Internet in the hands of the people who use it every day.

Please reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.
