

I rely on the Internet for information and as a public platform for free speech, equal opportunity, economic growth and innovation. Companies that provide Internet access have a commercial incentive to limit bandwidth and modulate the voices and messages that get heard, thereby impeding a free-flowing Web and potentially acting as a de facto censor of people's Internet content. These companies must not be given the power or potential to determine Internet content.

The FCC must retain the power to protect consumer access to the most important communications medium of our time. The FCC must keep the Internet and control its content in the hands of the people who use it every day. Please reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.
