

I strongly urge Chairman Genachowski not to cave on net neutrality. The fate of the Internet must not be determined in closed-door meetings with a few massive companies. Any deal that allows internet providers to build toll lanes online is not real net neutrality.

The FCC must reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers. For Chairman Genachowski to do otherwise would be a complete abdication of his responsibility. Thank you.

Prof. Cem Saydam, Charlotte, NC