

It is imperative to preserve net neutrality. The fate of the Internet must not be determined in closed-door meetings with a few massive companies. Any deal that allows internet providers to build toll lanes online is not real net neutrality. The Internet must remain free and accessible to the people of this country and it should not become an instrument of corporate control for the purpose of boosting profits and controlling communication.

The FCC must reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.
