

The internet is one of the last great public spaces in the world.

While other countries debate about whether high speed internet service should be a constitutional right, we are busy trying as hard as we can to hand over control to companies who have shown time and time again that their only interest is profit, not even providing a quality product seems to be that important to them.

The FCC can't cut private deals that would hand control over the Internet to a few massive phone and cable companies. Any compromise that allows Internet providers to build toll lanes online is not real Net Neutrality.

The agency must stand with the public and protect consumer access to the most important communications medium of our time. The FCC must regain its resolve to protect Net Neutrality on wired and wireless networks. Please reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.
