

I rely on the Internet as a public platform for free speech, equal opportunity, economic growth and innovation. Without vital Net Neutrality protections, companies like Verizon and Comcast, which have a commercial incentive to limit the free-flowing Web, can decide whether I will have a voice online. These companies should not have the power to determine my fate on the Internet.

In general, it seems as though this is a violation of freedom of speech, provided to me by my First Amendment rights, violating the Constitution. In addition, this is an interstate commerce issue, which is expressly enumerated in Article 1 of the Constitution.

This is a big problem that needs to be addressed now. In addition to the Constitutional issues listed above, service quality provided by both Comcast and Verizon already cover so many bases that they are severely lacking in specific areas of service (quality of customer service and quality of tools, respectively).
