

"I rely on the Internet as a public platform for free speech, equal opportunity, economic growth and innovation. Without vital Net Neutrality protections, companies like Verizon and Comcast, which have a commercial incentive to limit the free-flowing Web, can decide whether I will have a voice online. These companies should not have the power to determine my fate on the Internet."

Well said.. Ultimately The internet is the last uninhibited forum. Much of my life depends on knowing that no matter what the subject, I can find it on the internet. Being connected has become a staple of modern life and is synonymous with technological progression. Please don't sell my happiness.

The FCC can't cut private deals that would hand control over the Internet to a few massive phone and cable companies. Any compromise that allows Internet providers to build toll lanes online is not real Net Neutrality.

The agency must stand with the public and protect consumer access to the most important communications medium of our time. The FCC must regain its resolve to protect Net Neutrality on wired and wireless networks. Please reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.

Protect me FCC. Protect my interests. You're the sole champion of my will, my only advocate.
