

The internet gives the public the most open forum for expression, as well as the broadest access to the voices of others. It is so useful and important for the public to have this tool for research and communication.

I believe that allowing broadband companies like Verizon and AT&T to increase their control of the online space as a for-profit venture would be undemocratic.