

I feel that our federal regulators too often cave to big business and corporate interests. It is time they stopped caving and started taking a stand for the American people.

The internet should be an open public platform for free speech and equal access to online information. There should not be deals cut that would allow an Internet provider to regulate my use of online resources. That is not Net Neutrality.

Google and Verizon are taking their campaign to end Net Neutrality to Congress. It is imperative that the FCC take immediate action to enact strong Net Neutrality rules so that the internet can continue as we now know it.
