

The internet should not be controlled by any one ultimate source. If ultimate control overwhelms the internet we as a unit are all basically stating in every way, shape and form, that we accept going back in time, rather than move forward into the future. What am I talking about? The internet was created by the government and eventually opened the portal of the information era. As a result, if we as a unit just allow corporate control, we are going back in time to obsolescence means of acquiring useful information, such as; libraries, book stores and television. If corporate control of the internet becomes reality I will be the one who says...I told you so!

The FCC can't cut private deals that would hand control over the Internet to a few massive phone and cable companies. Any compromise that allows Internet providers to build toll lanes online is not real Net Neutrality.

The agency must stand with the public and protect consumer access to the most important communications medium of our time. The FCC must regain its resolve to protect Net Neutrality on wired and wireless networks. Please reclassify broadband as a "telecommunications service" and keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.
