

My apartment complex has an exclusive deal with a cable company. The cable company's services are horrible and too expensive. I only want internet and telephone. I want to have DSL from AT&T as the cable company does not have it. I want to know why exclusive deals are allowed after the Clayton Act forbids them because it prevents competition. I am renting the apartment. I feel unless they provide the internet in the rent they should not be able to require me to use a certain provider. I live in StoneyBrook Apartments
