

I recently checked into buying a Smart Phone from Verizon Wireless. I have been a cell phone customer of theirs for many years, and appreciate the reliability of their network. But, as a Low-Vision person, I could not find a SmartPhone that was accessible to me. The few phones that were suggested to me, by Verizon, did not have big enough System and SMS fonts, nor did they have an option to use a High Contrast Theme Mode, such as white letters on a black background, like my current non-Smartphone has, an LG Env2.

It'd be nice if SmartPhone designers could take into account that people with Low Vision, are customers too.
