

The merger of these two large corporations: Comcast and NBC Universal is a dangerous one. It will most definitely lessen the diversity on television as well as allow fewer opportunities for independents in the business, thus providing fewer outlets to have their stories/issues heard. Whether or not Comcast has a so-called commitment to diverse programming is irrelevant now, things will without doubt be different if this merger succeeds. With the growing concern about local programming and its abilities already on some peoples minds the addition of such a huge merger would likely hinder local station abilities even further.
