Dear Chairman Genachowski:

RE: GN Docket 09-191; WC Docket No. 07-52

Attached please find tens of thousands of signatures from Americans who have urged Washington policymakers to create rules that protect real Net Neutrality. We are concerned that the FCC is in the process of creating a rule that simply doesn't meet any meaningful standard of Net Neutrality protections.

Accordingly, over the course of the next two days, we will be submitting by hand two million signatures from members of the public who believe that the open Internet is vital to our future and must be protected.

Don't open the door for Internet Service Providers to engage in practices that will harm consumers by stifling free speech, equal opportunity and economic innovation. The public wants real Net Neutrality.

Respectfully submitted,

The SavetheInternet.com Coalition

That a group of giant communications companies seek to assert a right to profit from and control access to this resource is outrageous. The impact on the free flow of information is terrifying. “The great and wonderful internet was created using taxpayer money. As one who provided some of that money, I must question the legitimacy (while I disdain the sheer audacity) of those who would now attempt to restrict the free flow of data and charge us to use something we already paid to create and maintain. This is a scam of the first order. I urge you not only to take the side of people like me who have already paid their dues but to give the corporate interests wanting to charge us to use what we already paid for a stern rebuke that will show them for what they are – leaches and parasites sponging off the public good. “Net neutrality is the new frontier of free speech protection. Please do not give corporations the power to censor under the guise of protecting their bottom line. We have seen what can happen without such protections in place- AT&T censored political commentary, and Verizon interfered with NARAL Pro-Choice America’s ability to send text messages to its members. This is a scary prospect, and a slippery slope. Please continue to protect free speech in its new millennial frontiers. Sincerely, Ari Stern 11295 Raging Brook Drive Bowie, MD 20720”

“The Constitution protects free speech. But it does not grant an individual an audience or means to produce communications. Until now, that has kept media in the hands of the rich. But the internet has changed all that. The end of net neutrality is the end to the greatest step for free speech we’ve seen since the inception of the country. That’s the moral reason for supporting net neutrality. There is no way to look at broadband as anything other than two-way communications, the FCC needs to regulate this as it does other media, or why bother existing at all? And that’s the legal reason to change how things are done. Thank you Joel Handloff 3517 Madison St Hyattsville, MD 20782 Sincerely, Joel Handloff 3517 Madison St Hyattsville, MD 20782”

"The public has spoken out decisively and in huge numbers in support of net neutrality. Its preservation is essential to democracy. About 3-5 huge corporations already control virtually all of our public discourse. It is the FCC's duty to prevent such media monopolies from squelching free speech. The FCC must now do everything in its power to keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers, including reclassifying broadband Internet providers. Letting a few corporations (most of which are actually the same corporations that own the rest of the mass media) control the Internet too would silence all non-corporate voices in all mass media. I urge you to side with Internet users like me who favor a free and open Internet, instead of corporate interests who have financial incentives to limit a free-flowing web. The telcos' record on using the power to control access to the Internet indicates that they will censor anything not in their corporate interest (e.g. the Telecom Workers' Union page during a strike). Basic common sense tells you that this is not at all surprising. The proposition that any corporation will use power x to do y, if y is the most profitable, even if z is more in the public interest, is not some wacko conspiracy theory, it is a simple corollary of the universally acknowledged fact that corporations exist to maximize their profits. The behavior of an entity with a known primary motivating factor is completely predictable. Corporations will always act to maximize profits because any decision maker that fails to choose the most profitable option will be fired and replaced by a decision maker who will. "

"Our democracy depends on our citizenry's ability to engage in informed public discourse, which is increasingly reliant on the Internet. As a medium of communication, the Internet has effectively become a public good, and as such, must remain fair and neutral. We must not allow private interests—such as Comcast, and my own ISP, RCN—to continue to control our access to information. The public has spoken out decisively and in huge numbers in support of 'net neutrality. The FCC must now do everything in its power to keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers, including reclassifying broadband Internet providers. Joseph Lim Bowie, MD 20715	"To the FCC: Net neutrality is at the heart of the Internet. It's why the Internet has been such a powerful engine for free speech, democratic participation and economic innovation. Net neutrality is about giving citizens the information and tools they need to hold their leaders accountable and shape the decisions affecting their lives. The Internet is an essential infrastructure for democracy. Companies want to be Internet gatekeepers, deciding which Web sites go fast or slow and which won't load at all. Such online discrimination should not be tolerated."	"To the FCC: I am writing to support the internet neutrality rules currently under consideration by the FCC. I believe that the internet should be an open forum for the exchange of ideas and for sharing information. Private companies that try to control content prevent the internet from being the useful tool it can and should be. Some companies are trying to be gatekeepers on the internet and decide which web site will load more slowly or not go at all. An open internet allows citizens to get the information they need to hold their leaders accountable and shape the decisions affecting their lives. Please support the net neutrality rules."

Many people would not be able to use the internet if you allow the proposed rules to be established and we would lose this powerful tool for free speech, valuable information, democratic participation and economic innovation. "I am 83 years old and consider myself a "life-long learner." So of course, the internet provides invaluable sources for me - sometimes even a primary source. No wonder I don't want internet service providers to have power over what I am able to access! I believe the internet could be the greatest propaganda machine ever known if corporations are allowed to block sites or make more difficult the accessing of information. Since I am old enough to remember the infamous propaganda of the World War II era, I think I have the "wisdom" so often imputed to the elderly but seldom acted upon. Please preserve net neutrality! The public has spoken out decisively and in huge numbers in support of net neutrality. The FCC must now act to keep the Internet open and free of corporate gatekeepers.
