

Dear FCC:

Leave me alone, leave the internet alone, go home and enjoy your holidays and mind your own business. You have no right to try to regulate the internet. I wish the FCC didn't exist, and hopefully now that Americans are paying more attention to politics someday soon we'll be able to free up all the taxpayer money that's currently being wasted on FCC employee salaries. However if you want to prolong your unjust existence, you'd be better off keeping your head down, not trying to grab for even more power than what you already shouldn't have.

Once again, leave me alone,

Chelsea
