

To Whom it May Concern,

I am a Sirius XM Satellite Radio subscriber and investor. I have two lifetime XM subscriptions and one Sirius Everything subscription with internet radio. I should be able to decide if I want to continue with these or other subscriptions if Sirius XM decides to increase its rates. Artificially hamstringing the company with arbitrary price controls which could threaten Sirius XM's ability to attract and retain its talent could jeopardize my investment as well as the quality programming I currently enjoy.

I believe Sirius XM should be allowed to set the pricing it feels is required to stay profitable, reward its loyal shareholders, and be able to provide its stellar service and content. If they are not allowed to grow, their service will deteriorate, their content will leave for other up and coming services, and they won't be able to survive in an ever changing market. Today it's Pandora and the internet in vehicles, mp3s, CDs, Slacker, and terrestrial radio; three years from now, who knows what it will be.

As a consumer I want Sirius XM to have the flexibility to provide the best service possible, even if it means paying more for the service - a decision only I should have to make! I and the rest of the market place will decide a fair price with a continued subscription, or cancel and use one of the many other up and coming services. As an investor, I feel it would be unfair to restrict Sirius XM from setting prices while their competition has free reign to establish their price structures and allowing them to grow and develop products and services.

Even with FCC-imposed price controls over the past three years Sirius XM has done a remarkable job in growing its business and is actually thriving. But to extend these price controls is analogous to the plight of the parapalegic knight in the Monty Python movie "In Search of the The Holy Graille." It's full of fight, but Sirius XM will be drastically limited in its ability to meet the many challenges that currently confront the company, and those that will reveal themselves in the coming future. Please do not extend the Sirius XM price controls beyond their current expiration date.

Thank you for your consideration in this matter.

Sincerely,

Mike Strazzo
