

As a long time Sirius subscriber and small investor I would like to give my support for the pricing cap to be removed. SiriusXM is a discretionary item and should be treated as such. There is no justified explanation to keep a price cap on Siriusxm prices at this point. They company voluntarily agreed to the three year price cap and that should have more than sufficed as part of merger agreement.

Sirius pays as much or more in royalties than any other music business, yet they are held captive in adapting their price structure to grow and enhance their business. The idea of pricing will taker care of itself by the subscribers themselves. People have the choice to use this service or not, and will never be forced to pay for anything that they don't want to pay for.

Allowing the price cap to be removed seems like the only logical step at this point.

Thank you,

Brad La Bass