

While watching the HGTV channel this morning around 11:40 a.m., I saw a commercial advertising travel to Key West in which gay couples were shown in various intimate positions. I was OUTRAGED. First, this is wrong from a pure decency standpoint. I do not want my children nor myself to be barraged with same sex intimacy. Second, from a civil rights point of view, it was wrong. The target audience was obviously gay people, but as they claim their civil rights are being violated and they should be accorded the same rights similar as races are, then this was a prejudice commercial. What if the advertisers had marketed this Key West vacation to only white people or only Jews? This offensive commercial should be taken off the air waves. Thank you.
