

Verizon and Sprint do compete with AT&T in the US, but for travelers like myself AT&T already has a stronghold on the market because it has the GSM technology. CDMA operators can not compete with AT&T because they can not do reciprocal agreements with operators from other countries. If AT&T and T-Mobile merge there will be no competition in the market for people that need to roam internationally.

International roaming is already outrageously expensive. The only chance we have to make it competitive is to keep t-Mobile independent.
